EASTERN DATES TO AUGUST 3

EASTERN STATES

North Carolina Election.

NEW YORK August 1 —The Chairman of the Conservative Executive Committee of North Carolina telegraphs to the Tribune that the indications from all points on the election of Merriman give him a decisive majority

WASHINGTON August 2 10 A M —A dispatch received here from Senator Ransom of North Carolina, addressed to the editor of the Patriot, says that the State of North Carolina has certainly gone largely Democratic

Another special dispatch says that Leach has defeated Settle in the Fifth District

Banks' Letter.

BOSTON August 1 —General Banks letter declaring for Greeley is addressed to the Chairman of the committee at Lynn who invited him to address a Republican meeting there to night After thanking him for the invitation he expresses his regrets saying he is not in accord with the senders in regard to the Presidential canvass Against his wishes and his interests he is compelled to say that the perpetuation of the present policy of the Government is not for the advantage of the country, and that it will not tend to establish its former prosperity nor to promote the interests of any class of citizens No personal feelings of any former character enter into this judgment It is in view of national principles and public interests alone that I am led to this conclusion Uniting the masses of all parties and sections in support of grand results is indispensable to the permanent establishment and general recognition of those results It can be secured by no other means We shall all be forced to this conclusion sooner or later. This united action upon this basis has been the hope of my life I fervently desired it during the war, and in the reconstruction of the States during the war I believe it is now tendered in good faith in the nomination of Mr Greeley, and for one I cannot reject it It was what I desired Its consummation although sudden and startling does not alarm me My duty to myself and my country requires me to give it my support He closes with an expression of regret at feeling obliged to separate himself from those with whom he has been so long associated, and with assurances of friendship and esteem

The Kilpatrick Libel Suits.

About 10 o clock last night Chas Wilson a notorious thief and John Simpson aged only fourteen had an altercation on the Barbary Coast it is said over the division of the proceeds of a robbery and Wilson slapped the boy s face The latter thereupon drove a dirk knife into Wilson s neck severing the jugular and causing the blood to spurt in streams over him and the sidewalk Wilson died in three minutes. Simpson was arrested at his father s house and locked up to await the action of the Coroner

B C Whiting sues the city for $30 000 damage for being run over by a hook and ladder truck and crippled for life

POLITICAL NOTES

The Brockport (N J) Democrat an old Democratic paper has come out for Grant

A fine large wigwam built at Springfield, Ill , by the Republicans for the purposes of the campaign was formally opened by a tremendous meeting on the 25th of July

John T Pickett who sold the Confederate archives to the U S Government for $70 000, had the most of the money stolen from him by one of his partners in the transaction

Alonzo B Cornell Chairman of the New York State Republican Committee, has called a convention to meet at Utica, August 21st, to nominate a State ticket, Congressman at large and Presidential electors

The Portland (Maine) Press says "A dozen Greeleyites in Penobscot county become 100 when reported in the Kennebec valley, 500 in Portland, 5 000 in Boston and in the lying columns of the New York Tribune a tidal wave of 15,000, which united with the Democratic vote will sweep the State of Maine for Greeley like an avalanche "

Says the New York Independent Personal hatred of Gen Grant and a desire to become President himself are the two keys that unlock all the secrets of Greeley s course Determined to gratify the one, and just as anxious to gain the other he turned his eyes, as there can now be no doubt toward the Democratic party, courting it by complimentary editorials and hoping that its necessity would prove his opportunity

Now that Horace Greeley is the Democratic candidate for the Presidency we do not expect that the New York Tribune will have a word to say about Tammany frauds and robberies, or Democratic repeatings at the polls It will, doubtless, take its cue from the New York World and howl against the Federal bayonets that have reduced Democratic majorities in New York city A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind

Horace Greeley in his ' Recollections of Busy Life, speaking of Seward s Presidential aspirations, says ' Great intellectually, as Daniel Webster was, he would have been morally greater and every way more useful and honored, had he sternly responded, 'Get thee behind me, Satan,' to every suggestion that he might yet attain the Presidency. I hope Mr Seward will outlive, if he has not already outlived, his ambition in the same direction " Horace had no idea then of running for the Presidency, evidently. Substitute Greeley's name in the foregoing extract for Webster's and Seward's and it reads very well. Neither Webster nor Seward deserted their party for the sake of a Presidential nomination,

Speaking of Greeley's reception of the Democratic committees of Chappaqua, the Chicago Times (Dem) says "It turns out after all that the philosopher did not finish up the reconciliation business at Chappaqua as he ought to have done He neglected to reconcile the Democratic to the liberal philosophic virtues by providing fine cut, cigars and rum to his guests. The fact seems to be that he supplied nothing more conciliatory and virtuous than sundry hogsheads of lemonade, and that hosts and guests parted in a state of disgusting sobriety. Perhaps it was out of an undemocratic republican regard for the ladies who were sandwiched in among the 'blacklegs, pugilists, keepers of dens of ill fame, criminals and those who are popularly designated as roughs,' that the final ceremony of reconciliation was postponed to a more convenient season "

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN]

EASTERN STATES.

North Carolina Election—10,000 Republican Majority Claimed

NEW YORK, Aug 2 —The World s Raleigh special puts Merriman s majority at 10 000

The Herald editorially says it is unsafe to hazard a prediction as to the result from the meagre returns in hand, and that after all it is possible that the negro vote will give the State to the Republicans

The T[illegible] editorially thinks that the returns do not warrant a positive statement as to the result, that the gains in the cities may be a grave deception being caused by the return of negroes to their country places of registry

A FRENCH IMPOSTOR

From Chambers's Journal

The following extraordinary case of successful imposture, although it occurred upwards of one hundred and seventy years ago, is sufficient to show [illegible] how easily the unthinking portion of mankind may be induced to believe statements of the most preposterous character, and how readily they lend their support to claims which bear on their surface the marks of invalidity and falsehood, but also that men of acknowledged talent, whose whole lives have been passed in sifting and weighing evidence, may be duped by a clever [illegible] possession of a retentive memory and [illegible] stock of and [illegible] perseverance.

In most instances of criminal impersonation an extraordinary resemblance between the genuine and so[illegible] individuals has first suggested and then supported the fraud; but in the case of Pierre Mege, the hero (if he may be called such) of the following story, no such likeness existed. It would be difficult to find two persons more dissimilar in face, form, character and education than the noble and cultivated Sieur de Rougon and the ungainly and ignorant French soldier who undertook to act his part. Yet the imposter, in one court of law, gained his case and entered upon the full enjoyment of the property in the face of evidence which declared that the person he claimed to be was dead and buried.

Scipion le Brun de Castellane, lord of Caille and Rougon, was married, in the year 1655, to Mademoiselle Judity le Gouche. Both were Calvinists, and the husband was one of the most earnest members of that sect. Their place of residence was Manosque, a town in Provence, and their family consisted of five children—three boys and two girls. The two younger sons died at an early age, but the elder brother survived until he was thirty-two. The baptismal register of the Calvinists having been lost upon the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, the date of Isaac's birth could not be verified from this source, but any doubts on this point were set at rest by an entry in the journal of M. Bourdin, his grandfather, with whom Monsieur de Caille and his wife resided. This entry proves Isaac's birth to have taken place on the 19th November 1664. In 1679, Madame de Caille died, and, by her will, she made her surviving son Isaac her heir, and gave her daughters legacies, leaving, however, a life-interest in the whole of her property to her husband, who determined to give his now only son an education suited to the position he was destined ultimately to fill.

On the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, the family were obliged to leave France, and settled at Lausanne, in Switzerland, canton of Berne. Here one of the daughters died in 1686, and the grandfather in 1690. In the year 1689, a law was passed in France giving to their nearest Catholic relatives the property of those Calvinists who were fugitives from the kingdom on account of their religion. Monsieur de Caille remained faithful, and preferred sacrificing his estate to abjuring his creed. His property was claimed by Madame Anne le Gonche, the sister of Madame de Caille, and the wife of M. Rolland, Avocat-general to the Supreme Court of Dauphine. It was, however, ultimately decided that the estate should be divided. Property producing annual rental of twelve thousand francs fell to a Madame Tardivi, another relative, whilst Madame Rolland's share brought in a rental of only two thousand five hundred francs.

Monsieur de Caille's eldest son, who was known as Monsieur de Rougon, appears to have been of very studious habit, and devoted himself to the study of literature and science. Indeed, severe application was supposed to have greatly aggravated the disease to which he ultimately fell a victim. He died of consumption, on the 15th February, 1696, at Vevay, in the presence of his father and others, having thus reached the age of thirty-two years.

On the death of her nephew, whom she had [illegible] making her heir, Madame Rolland, who had no children, and who, it is to be remembered, remained in France, made over, for the benefit of the poor of Manosque, the house which had been Monsieur de Caille's family residence, together with property producing seven or eight hundred francs a year, and gave as her reason for making this bequest, the death of Isaac le Brun de Rougon, her nephew.

In the month of March, 1699, a soldier (soldat de marine) appeared before Monsieur de Vauvray, Intendant de la Marine at Toulon, and [illegible] that he was the son of Monsieur de Caille. His history, as he gave it, was as follows: He had always had the misfortune to be on very bad terms with his father, in consequence of his indisposition to study, and the preference he manifested for the Roman Catholic religion. His father had hated him, and at Lausanne, where the family had retreated, the ill-treatment he had received became unbearable. In order to escape from his father's violence, the soldier alleged that he had fled the house several times, and at last he had been placed in close confinement. Through the assistance of a servant, he was enabled, in December, 1690, to effect his escape, and to avoid recapture, and to be enabled to embrace the Catholic faith, he determined to return to Provence. On the road thither, he was captured by some Savoyard troops, who pressed him into the service, but he was subsequently taken prisoner by a portion of a French army under the command of Monsieur de Catinat, to whom he divulged his real name, and by whom he was furnished with a passport to return to France. He then entered the militia of Provence; and one day, whilst on guard at the governor's house, his eyes fell on a silver bowl bearing the arms of the De Caille family, which his father had sold with the rest of his plate, when leaving France for Switzerland. He was so moved by this circumstance, that he at once burst into tears, and on being asked the reason, said "I have very good reason indeed to weep," at the same time showing a seal upon which the same arms were engraved, in order to show that he was nearly related to those to whom the piece of plate had originally belonged.

The militia having been disbanded, our soldier went to Marseilles, where he said he made the acquaintance of one Honorade Venelle, the wife of Pierre Mege, with whom resided her mother and her two sisters-in-law. The picture he drew of these women was far from complimentary. They were of doubtful character, and had not even the outward appearance of being respectable. With Honorade Venelle he formed a liaison of a criminal nature—in fact, according to his story, it was arranged between them that he should, in the absence of her husband, impersonate him, and on all occasions should assume the character and act the part of Pierre Mege. He did so. As Pierre Mege he had received and paid away money, as Pierre Mege he had settled money upon Honorade Venelle, as Pierre Mege he had enlisted for service in the galley La Fidele, and as Pierre Mege he had been discharged, on the force to which he belonged being reduced. In 1697 he again joined—always under the name of Pierre Mege—and on his enlisting, he added the sobriquet sans regret, which the man whose name the soldier alleged he merely assumed, had, it was subsequently ascertained, made use of on five similar occasions.

Such was the story which this remarkable soldier gave of his antecedents. The name of the person who first brought him under the notice of Monsieur de Vauvray was La Violette, a carpenter by trade, but who at one time had been a valet in Monsieur de Caille's household, and about this time there appears to have been a marriage arranged between the soldier and La Violette's sister, but this match was broken off, probably as being hardly in keeping with the character of one who claimed to be a scion of an old aristocratic French family. At all events the proposed union did not take place.

Monsieur de Vauvray, the soldier's superior, who was a devout Catholic, considered it his duty to pave the way for his subordinate's admission to the true faith. He therefore laid the matter before the Jesuits, and the result was that a short time afterward he was enabled to be present at the formal abjuration of his protege, made on June 10 1699, in the presence of the Vicar-General of Toulon.

On this solemn occasion the soldier stated that his name [illegible] d'Entrevergues, son of Scipion d'Entrevergues, lord of Caille and [illegible] Madame [illegible] de Caille. He gave his age as twenty-three, and said he could neither read nor write. This apparently [illegible] Monsieur de Vauvray's eyes, or at least aroused his suspicions, for he expressed himself unable to believe that the son of a wealthy man of rank should never have been taught to read or write, although he might, as he alleged, have quarreled with his father on account of his lazy habits. The report of the abjuration was noised abroad. Monsieur de Caille was communicated with at Lausanne, and in answer he stated that his son, the Sieur de Rougon, had died on February [illegible], and sent a proper certificate of his death, which was forwarded to Monsieur de Vauvray. It now transpired that the name of Monsieur [illegible] and that [illegible] that his [illegible] was [illegible] thirty-five [illegible] twenty-three [illegible] born on November 19 1664, and finally that the family name was Le Brun [illegible] and not D'Entrevergues. Monsieur de Vauvray, interested as he had been in the temporal and spiritual welfare of the soldier, now thought it high time to have him arrested, and after a correspondence with the ministers of the king he was handed over to the civil authorities, and lodged in Toulon jail. All depositions and documents bearing upon the case were ordered to be given up to the Register of the Criminal Court. The soldier demanded that he should be [illegible] examination, and it was evident he wished to take advantage of scraps of information gained since his arrest. He now said that he had never known his right name, but that his father had invariably called him D'Entrevergues de Rougon de Caille, and he altered his age from twenty-three to twenty-five. He denied ever having seen or known his godfather or godmother, and affirmed that he was only six years old when he left Manosque, albeit it was well known to many that Monsieur de Caille's son was twenty-one when the family left their native country. He again declared he could neither read nor write, and alleged as a reason for never having learned that his eye-sight had been too weak to admit of it. He neither knew the names of the streets of Manosque nor the position of his father's house in that town, and he could describe none of the rooms in it. He said his father had three instead of five children. He could not describe the appearance of his sister. He knew neither the color of her hair nor her height. He said his father's hair and beard were black and his complexion dark, and that in stature he was short and corpulent. Now, the Sieur had in reality brown hair, a red beard, and a pale face. The claimant could give no description of his aunt Madame Lignon, yet she had lived with Isaac le Brun at Lausanne. He could neither describe the stature, features nor hair of his grandmother, who had taken refuge at Lausanne, nor could he remember whether there were other residents in the house, where his father lodged at Lausanne, besides his family, and finally he knew nothing whatever about the friends and relatives of the family at Geneva.

The Judge of the Criminal Court before whom this examination took place ordered that the depositions should be forwarded to Monsieur de Caille and the nearest relations. The soldier had been sent to Madame Rolland and Monsieur Tardivi, and even to many persons who neither held the estates nor knew anything of the family. Madame Rolland answered by indorsing the statements made by Monsieur de Caille in reference to her nephew's residence in Switzerland and his death on February 15, 1696.

The Criminal Court now issued an order that the soldier should be taken to Manosque and other places, and confronted with those who could speak positively to his identity one way or the other, but at this juncture Monsieur Rolland, who had come to Toulon on behalf of his wife, obtained permission to proceed against the soldier as Pierre Mege, and accordingly this was done. Twenty witnesses swore that he was Pierre Mege, the son of a convict in the galleys, and some of them said they had possessed an acquaintance with him extending over twenty years. Others with as great certainty swore that he was not Isaac, the eldest son of Monsieur de Caille, with whom they had been fellow students.

It might have been supposed that this evidence would have utterly disconcerted any imposter. But the countenance of the soldier expressed little besides firmness and courage, and many saw only in his calm and self collected manner a determination to win back his own in spite of everything, and notwithstanding the fact that appearances were, for the time, greatly against him. He demanded that he should be confronted with Monsieur Rolland in the presence of his judges. He charged that gentleman with having attempted to poison him whilst in jail, and he succeeded in thus exciting the sympathies of the public in his favor. Finally, he demanded that the order of the court, that he should visit the places where Isaac le Brun was known, should be carried out. After much delay, he was taken to Aix, and on the road, an attack, instigated, the prisoner alleged, by Monsieur Rolland, was made upon him by three men, who put a pistol to his head, and tried to compel him to escape, and his keeper swore to the truth of this statement, and said that he had to come to his rescue. This part of the story was never thoroughly cleared up, but at the same time it certainly strengthened the soldier's case.

Monsieur de Caille, who, it must be remembered, was all this time in Switzerland and unable to attend the trials personally on account of the laws against Calvinists in France, signed a deposition on January 6 1700. He simply affirmed that his son Isaac died on February 15, 1696, and that, being neither bereft to the common feelings of humanity nor of those of a father, he should have requested his relations to inquire into the matter, had he any cause whatever to doubt the fact of the occurrence, but as he had seen his son die, such a doubt did not exist. Monsieur de Caille at the same time gave full power to an attorney to prosecute the imposter for a criminal offence before the Supreme Court of Provence.

By an order of the court the prisoner was then removed to Toulon to be tried and to receive a final sentence. This decision did not appear to disconcert him in the least. He always expressed himself with certainty as to the ultimate result of the trial, and said he was sure that if his father, the Sieur de Caille, could see him, he would recognize him, and that parental tenderness would lead him to own him. Those around him saw no signs of wavering, no hesitation, no nervousness, nor any mark of imposture.

At his trial, however, which was proceeded with at Toulon, he maintained a most [illegible] silence, and his cause had to be read out, as for one who was in reality dumb. This behavior was no doubt greatly against the prisoner, but apparently did not affect the issue of the case. He was charged with impersonating a man who was dead—in itself a capital offence—but he appealed from the whole criminal proceedings, and demanded that he should be allowed to prove before the parliament of Provence who he was. After further delay this was allowed. Both sides set vigorously to work to collect evidence. The soldier was taken to Manosque, to Caille, and to Rougon. Many persons recognized him as Isaac de Castellane, and after these journeys, which were almost triumphal in character, the soldier had found upwards of one hundred witnesses who were preparing to swear to his desired identity.

On the other hand Monsieur de Caille's side undertook to prove: First, that his eldest son died on February 15 1696; secondly, that the soldier was not his son; thirdly, that he was Pierre Mege. Monsieur Rolland tried hard to induce the Parliament to delegate the powers of a magistrate in partibus to some one resident in Switzerland, who should take the depositions of witnesses in reference to the residence and death of Isaac le Brun at Vevay, as it was owing to this weighty evidence not having been given before a judge of the French courts that it had not been deemed fully admissible; but this course was violently opposed by the soldier's counsel, and the case was brought to a conclusion without Monsieur Rolland having gained his point. The soldier renewed his attacks upon Monsieur Rolland, accused him with tampering with the depositions, and brought experts who swore that the alterations were in his handwriting, charged him with erasing other portions with corrosives, accused all his witnesses of perjury, and by the aid of his own band of followers he was, after fifteen sittings and another examination, declared to be the son of Monsieur de Caille.

The public joy at this decision was immense. Merchants and shopkeepers, farmers and laborers alike left their work and added to the dense throng that had assembled round the court and choked up its approaches since the early morning. The judges were drawn home by the mob, and it was as much as some of them could do to prevent them carrying him off on their shoulders.

Three weeks afterwards the soldier married the daughter of Monsieur Serri, a physician, who had furnished the expenses of the trial, and the young lady being rich [illegible] the judges who had given their verdict in favor of her husband, it was alleged [illegible] of the property [illegible] him in their [illegible]. However [illegible] the soldier obtained Monsieur de Caille's property. [illegible] Madame Rolland [illegible] which had [illegible] residence. This was particularly [illegible] house on a visit [illegible] previously to this institution [illegible] when looking up at the windows [illegible] "You are within whilst I [illegible] out, still I will not [illegible]." A short time afterwards, the soldier had his portrait engraved with these words under it:

[illegible] Le Brun [illegible] Caille
[illegible] to the King
Aged [illegible]

Below again were verses, of which the following is a free translation:

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Monsieur Rolland was ruined by the adverse judgment, but did not give up the struggle. He at once took the necessary steps to obtain a reversal of the decision, and obtained leave to bring the matter before the King's Council, and he was strengthened in the hope of ultimately gaining the day by the fact that Honorade Venelle, the wife of Pierre Mege, who had kept silence during the trial, now came forward and positively declared the soldier to be her husband, to whom she was lawfully married in 1685. Such a declaration, however, giving as it did the lie direct to the judges' decision, induced them to order her immediate arrest, and she was confined in jail at Aix. On the case coming before the Council, Monsieur de la Chiniere appeared for Monsieur Rolland and Monsieur Sylvain for the soldier, the result being that the judgment of the Provencal Parliament was reversed by a majority of thirteen numbers and the case ordered to be sent before the Parliament of Paris.

This reversal wrested the property from the hands of the soldier, and a favorable termination to another and entirely new trial could alone restore it to him. He had, however, gained one grand point. His life was no longer in danger, as the French law did not admit of any one being twice put on trial for the same capital offence, and the decision of the judges of the Parliament of Provence given in his favor after criminal proceedings had once been commenced against him removed him from a position of great peril.

The scene of the great struggle was now removed to Paris, and it was now before the Parliament of that city that the case was to be more fully investigated and a final conclusion arrived at. The counsel employed on behalf of the soldier was again Monsieur Sylvain, and in addition Monsieur Terrasson, who was well known at the French bar as an able and eloquent lawyer, and an upright and conscientious man. Monsieur de la Bimiere again appeared for Monsieur Rolland.

There probably never was a case in which such hard swearing and counter-swearing took place, or where the counsel on either side appeared more thoroughly convinced of the righteousness of the claims of their respective clients.

On behalf of the soldier it was urged that his steady, uniform adherence to his story throughout the case was greatly in his favor, and it was denounced as absurd to suppose that a man without brains, education, money or any kind of resources, would have dared to take a name to which he was not justly entitled. It was argued that such a proceeding would require powers of intellect and memory that would have been nothing less than superhuman. The soldier's marriage with Mademoiselle Serri was adduced in his favor, as it was pointed out, with some apparent show of reason, that he would now have been fool enough to have married again whilst his first wife was alive, and thus run the risk of a second criminal prosecution, should she choose to give evidence against him. Numberless witnesses again gave testimony in his favor. Esprit Martine deposed that she had nursed Monsieur de Caille's son, and had weaned him. Her account of what he was like tallied exactly with what the soldier then was. She detailed the scars which Isaac le Brun had upon his body, and similar marks were found upon the soldier. She swore positively that they were one and the same person.

Catherine Regniere also swore to having nursed Isaac, and said she recognized him the very moment she set eyes on him, upon which occasion she had been unable to restrain her tears. She gave a clear description of the various cicatrices which Isaac le Brun had on his body, and concluded by swearing that the soldier was the same being she had nursed.

Catherine Pierron, another nurse, recognized him by his eyes, his thin legs, his matted hair, and she swore in an equally unhesitating manner as to his identity as Isaac le Brun de Castellane.

Louise Maudette, in whose care Isaac had been placed after he was weaned, also gave an account of the scars which the soldier bore, and declared she recognized him as Isaac by his cheek bones, which were just like those of the boy she had once had charge of.

Monsieur de Mongasten, among many others, declared that, after putting a great number of searching questions to the soldier, his answers satisfied him that he was the man he claimed to be.

Twenty-four servants swore to his identity, and a host of other witnesses, without saying positively that he was the son of Monsieur de Caille, testified to the remarkable resemblance he bore to that person. According to these witnesses, Isaac le Brun de Castellane had always promised to be tall. He had a slouching figure, with large, bony and prominent shoulders. He was pot bellied. His skin was white, his hands were long and clammy, his legs were the same size all the way down, and in addition he was knock kneed. He was very thin, and had a sickly and delicate complexion, but want and toil had served to harden him. He was ugly and very disagreeable; his head was buried between his shoulders. His hair was coarse, black and lank. His face was long, his forehead projecting and irregular. His eyes were small, deep set and watery. His temples and cheek bones were large, and his cheeks were hollow. His nose was flat, his chin sharp, his mouth large, and filled with black and ugly teeth. Naturally his complexion was pale, and he rouged his face to avoid looking like a corpse. His voice was like a woman's. His appearance was contemptible. The general expression of his face was idiotic. He had the manner of a clown and the gait of a fool. He had a scar on the left eyebrow caused by a stone thrown at him; scars beneath both eyes, produced by the incision of a lancet. At his birth his ears were attached to his head at the outer edge in such a manner as to make it necessary to separate them with a razor. He had marks of scrofula on his neck, and a large tumour beneath the knee, which had been punctured thrice. As a child his great toe was lanced for inflammation caused by the nail growing into the quick. His nurse had cauterized his left leg. At the back of his head there was a large pointed bone which protruded in a very remarkable manner. His father, grandfather and uncle had a similar peculiarity, which indeed was hereditary in his family. Finally the son of Monsieur de Caille resembled his mother in the eyes, the nose and the lower part of his face. He resembled Mademoiselle le Gouche and Sainte Etienne, his cousins, but above all, he was like Madame de Lignon, his aunt, and Mademoiselle la Coulettee, his cousin. Such was the description of his person. As to his mind he was, it is alleged, stupid, and rarely spoke without making some silly remark. It was found impossible to teach him either to read or to write. He was brutal, passionate, [illegible], without feeling, and always ill-used children of his own age. He had a cringing aspect and the manners of a groom, and he fled from the society of respectable people to enjoy that of scoundrels.

This description was flatly contradicted by Monsieur Rolland's witnesses, and the soldier's counsel urged that as Monsieur Isaac de Castellane could not have two noses, two mouths, in short two faces and two bodies, his was the right portrait. Witnesses were brought who stated that Monsieur de Caille was never at his [illegible] at [illegible] swore that [illegible] write and [illegible] this was a thing [illegible] many several [illegible] cited of [illegible] good position who [illegible] whose [illegible] had been [illegible] persons who [illegible]. [illegible] were [illegible] evidence of those who appeared [illegible] [illegible] Monsieur [illegible] [illegible] it was [illegible] [illegible] from a [illegible] that [illegible].

On the other hand [illegible] witnesses [illegible] numerous [illegible] upon Isaac le Brun. According to their estimation, Monsieur de Caille's son had fine eyes, a well formed nose, a small and rosy mouth, a remarkably well formed face and a beautiful complexion. He was [illegible] but firmly and compactly built. He [illegible] himself well, and had a most pleasing expression of countenance. His manners were winning, and his disposition kind. He was a man of high character and [illegible] mind. He was well informed [illegible] and vivacity, yet at the same time gentle and unassuming. He spoke French perfectly, and was devoted to the exercises of both body and mind. He was much attached to his own profession of faith, was [illegible], fair in his dealings. In fine he was a scholar, a gentleman and a Christian.

Four of Isaac's tutors deposed to his having learned to read and write, and to his having studied Greek and Latin at College. [illegible] attested certificates, signed by the French Minister at Geneva, from five different professors, set forth that Isaac le Brun had attended their lectures at Geneva during three years. As it had been urged that he had forgotten to read and write, Monsieur de la Bimiere pointed out that the soldier had [illegible] over having been able to learn to read or write.

With regard to the proofs of Isaac de Castellane's death, certificates were produced from the Magistrates at Vevay establishing the fact. Other depositions were also forwarded after having been authenticated by the authorities of Berne and the Marquis de Puysieux, the French Ambassador in Switzerland, among others those of Monsieur le Sage, the minister who attended Isaac le Brun on his death bed, of Monsieur Secretan, in whose house he lived, of the doctor and chemist who attended him, of the watchers who had been placed over his bed, and who had laid it out, of the [illegible] who had prepared the corpse for burial, and [illegible] several others who attended the sick man during his last illness, and who had subsequently followed him to his grave. Monsieur de Caille [illegible] the evidence of two [illegible] other witnesses who had known the deceased [illegible] Lausanne, and who gave an account of [illegible] of the illness that [illegible] and of his general appearance [illegible]. Isaac le Brun's [illegible] gave [illegible] and the vicar of the parish of St [illegible] Grenoble deposed that he was present when Madame Rolland received the news of her nephew's death in 1696. This was the principal evidence brought forward in proof of the death of Isaac le Brun, and [illegible] most people would consider it sufficiently convincing, and in the end it proved so. [illegible], however, was forthcoming to show who the soldier really was, and thus was subsequently placed beyond doubt. Honorade Venelle came forward and swore unhesitatingly that Pierre Mege was her husband, whom she had married in 1685, and with whom she had cohabited until 1699. Her reasons for keeping so rigid a silence since she first heard of her husband's villainous proceedings were perfectly valid and comprehensible. Had she attempted to verify his statements, her position would have been that of particeps criminis; on the other hand, had she given information as to who he really was, she would in effect have been signing his death warrant, and she determined to let things take their course, the more so as her position as a married woman was not imperilled until the marriage of Pierre Mege with Mademoiselle Serri. Her evidence, coupled with that of many other witnesses, established the identity of the soldier as Pierre Mege, who had enlisted seven times in the French army, against whom a warrant for violence against a clergyman had been issued, who had three times abjured his religion, and who had been guilty of many other vile actions.

In this extraordinary case [illegible] it stands [illegible] three hundred and ninety [illegible] witnesses who had [illegible] Isaac de Castellane were examined [illegible]. Of these one hundred and ten either swore positively that the soldier was the son of Monsieur de Caille, or that they believed him to be such. Of these one hundred and ten witnesses twenty said that the impostor resembled Madame Rolland [illegible] the slightest likeness existed between the two. Sixteen were convicted of falsehood out of their own mouths. One extraordinary fact was noticed during the trial: the journal of Monsieur de Bourdin, Isaac de Castellane's maternal grandfather, contained an entry of the names of the five different nurses who had attended his grandson when a child, and these did not correspond with either the Christian or surnames of those examined during this trial, and it was proved that one of them, Martine Esprit, could only have been seven years old at the very time she swore she suckled Isaac le Brun.

On behalf of Madame Rolland one hundred and eighty-four witnesses were examined. Of these thirty-eight swore that the soldier was not the son of Monsieur de Caille; seven, at the Toulon trial, swore the same. All these witnesses agreed with those at Lausanne and Vevay in their description of Isaac le Brun. One hundred and thirty witnesses swore that the soldier was Pierre Mege, whom they had known some fifteen, others twenty, and again, others twenty-five years. At the Toulon trial one gave similar evidence. They showed themselves to be thoroughly conversant with his history [illegible] him [illegible] Pierre Mege.

It [illegible] members of the family of De Caille rejected the soldier as an impostor from the very first. Only [illegible] who had never seen Isaac le Brun [illegible], and this statement was afterwards withdrawn. Among the witnesses of the soldier there were [illegible] beggars subsisting on charity at Manosque, and sixty workmen and peasants who were unable to read and write; among the witnesses on behalf of Madame Rolland [illegible] more than two-thirds were burgesses, lawyers, gentlemen, clergymen [illegible].

On the 17th March [illegible] years from the date upon which the [illegible] came forward, the Supreme Court [illegible] decided that he was not the son of Monsieur de Caille, but was Pierre Mege. He was thrown into prison. [illegible] Mademoiselle Serri, with whom [illegible] through the [illegible] of the marriage, after the absurd decision of the [illegible] Parliament, commenced [illegible] Monsieur Sylvain [illegible] in which she sought to obtain an order to oppose the [illegible] and her marriage illegal. This involved a prosecution for bigamy [illegible] which was to have been [illegible] before Mademoiselle Serri's case had been terminated, death had summoned him before a higher tribunal.

Although it is difficult within the prescribed limits of a magazine article to give a faithful account of such a protracted trial, we have endeavored to do so. Much of the evidence has of course necessarily been omitted, together with the speeches of the counsel, but enough has been said to show that boldness and effrontery are principally needed for successful imposture, and that the clearest and most unimpeachable evidence is sometimes [illegible] sufficient to [illegible] the fraudulent designs of those who possess [illegible].

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr Gibbon's Dispensary,
623 KEARNY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL
San Francisco. Established in 1854 for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe [illegible] practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street [illegible] Commercial, San Francisco [illegible]

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases.

[illegible] persons of both male and female [illegible] who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences or from virtue [illegible] and [illegible] their broken down constitutions [illegible] the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation [illegible] Send them immediately to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his especial study for years and will certainly cure the most inveterate case, without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who in all cities publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public [illegible] the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical [illegible] [illegible] the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN.

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of the fearful maladies should not [illegible] sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain a certain relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible and will give to each patient a written instrument binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME by addressing a letter to Dr Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions by inclosing Ten Dollars coin, in registered letter through the Postoffice or through Wells, Fargo & Co. A package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union.

All communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders who with bogus sworn to certificates dupe the unwary. Some of the self styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are tradesmen and became too lazy to work at their trades. Some are tinsmiths, shoemakers, newspaper carriers, intelligence office keepers etc. The only way to avoid imposition is to make inquiry—it will cost you nothing, and may save you many regrets. For as advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten are bogus, there is no safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Dr. Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, pretended patients' letters, etc. Dr Gibbon will satisfy persons who may call at his office of his ability to treat diseases that he proposes to cure.

Address DR. J. F. GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco. Post Office Box 1,957.

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER.

SATURDAY MORNING AUG [illegible]

The Old North State

[illegible] seems likely [illegible] the result of the election [illegible] North Carolina is involved in [illegible] uncertainty. The meager reports which [illegible] held is continually [illegible] which [illegible] can be based. The Democrats [illegible] and they [illegible] innocent telegraph saying it had brought [illegible] the [illegible] they had [illegible] confidence in the report which was as they would have [illegible] when it reported a majority against them their faith in its truthfulness wonderfully diminished. Now we make no pretense of knowing how the vote stands but good judges all admit that the result has been close and that further reports will have to be received [illegible] any definite statement can be made. North Carolina has since the war been rather a doubtful State. In 1868 it was swept by the Republicans with a majority of nearly 10 000 but in 1870 the Democrats, or Conservatives, as they preferred [illegible] themselves had got control and elected General Vance by five thousand. This was the last election in the State which was really a party test although in a subsequent local contest the measures generally endorsed by the Republicans carried. If in the present election the Democrats have carried the State it is no great wonder, and will only arouse the Republican party to more activity in the great national contest in November. We can afford to lose North Carolina by ten or fifteen thousand, and then can beat Greeley badly in November.

Greeley's Bargains

In an article reviewing Mr Greeley's bargains for political advancement involving dishonesty and double dealing the Cincinnati Gazette says it is established that as long ago as August last Greeley began to intrigue with leading Democrats to secure the Democratic nomination for the Presidency that this intrigue was continued through the winter and quite up to the time of the Cincinnati Convention, and that, to secure the desired nomination Mr Greeley was willing to announce himself in favor of the payment of pensions to disabled Southern soldiers.

The N Y Times comments on these revelations in an incisive style. It observes that "Greeley is trying to make great capital of his former Republicanism. His followers talk of him as the 'Father of the party' and ask quite defiantly why Democrats should not be trusted if they put up such a tried Republican as he? But what are we to think of the record of Mr Greeley as revealed by the Binghamton Republican? While editing a professed Republican journal, in which he constantly paraded his complaint of not having enough patronage from a Republican Administration to open negotiations with Democratic politicians to make and receive propositions about the conduct of the Presidential canvass the issues to be made and the attitude of his paper, to declare himself in sympathy with Democratic ideas, to entertain revolting propositions about pensions for rebel soldiers and, finally, to ask Democratic aid in getting a nomination from a set of bolters from the Republican party—what sort of Republicanism is this? We ask all honorable and sincere Republicans what they think of the political reliability of such a man? Suppose he should be elected President, what would control him—the remembrance of his former professions, or fear of an allegiance to the men who have involved him in his latest entangling alliances? Republicans who believe Democratic tendencies dangerous, and Democratic supremacy an evil to be avoided would do well to answer this question candidly and plainly to themselves.

The Colored Vote

A correspondent of the New York Times writing from North Carolina says that the Greeley orators were utterly unable to move a single colored man in the canvass. He relates this incident which took place at Greensboro:

Just beyond the hearing of the voice of Doolittle who was garbling and perverting Boutwell's speech in a way that would have disgraced a pot-house politician was a group of several negroes. Presently a Greeleyite came along, and with a good deal of the old plantation dictatorial manner sought to have these negroes attend the meeting and listen to the Democratic arguments. None of the blacks paid any attention to him whereupon he opened upon them with a fierce tirade to the effect that they would listen to only one side, and were more slaves than they ever were. To this, one of the group a tall jet black man, who was evidently a pure African answered "We doesn't know dat sah but we does know that we can't be tied up and whipped any more dat our wives and children can't be sold away from us and dat we has the money we earns and we knows de 'Publican party done git us all dat and we se gwine to vote de 'Publican ticket." The Greeleyite hereupon changed his tactics, and wanted to know what better Republican they wanted than Greeley, and launched into an impassioned eulogy of Greeley as the first and firm friend of the colored race the original advocate of emancipation and negro suffrage. To all this the African only said "Dat may all be, sah. We nebber learn nuffin about it, but dar must be somethin wrong wid Mr Greeley now or you uns wouldn't be for him." This simple rejoinder was unanswerable.

Grant in Missouri

The Missouri Staats Zeitung has a calculation upon which it bases the conviction that Grant will receive a majority of 10 000 in Missouri. It says that, aside from the important changes wrought in the relative strength of the parties by enfranchisement of the colored men and the immigration of voters from other States the number of the Liberal Republicans since 1870 has fearfully decreased. Upon this point the Staats Zeitung remarks:

In 1870 every German paper in the State was fire and flame for the Liberal movement. Five dailies and two weeklies have now decided for the Republican party one daily is firm against Greeley though not Republican. Two weeklies are more favorably disposed toward the Republican than towards the Cincinnati ticket. Three new weeklies have been started of which the most prosperous is Republican while the two others almost without any subscribers are very enthusiastic Greeley sheets. Of the German Republicans who in 1870 stood almost unanimous for the Liberal cause already at least four fifths [illegible] returned to the Republican camp. The same is the case with the American [illegible] only on a much larger scale. [illegible] who knows the State will admit that [illegible] St Louis and its immediate neighborhood the appearance of the Liberal Republicans is only a sporadic one and is confined almost exclusively to the circles of [illegible].

Sanguine and credulous Democrats in the city at a late hour last night claimed to have received news later than the press dispatches to the effect that North Carolina had given the Democrats [illegible] 000 majority.

OREGON

Crops are turning out very well in Washington county.

There are not enough people in Salem now to please the hotel keepers in the place.

There seems to be a great scarcity of laborers in Washington county. Men are wanted.

The test mony [illegible] being taken in the contest over the office of Chief Engineer of the Salem Fire Department.

[illegible]

The threshing season has commenced in the valley. A few lots of new wheat has been received at Salem and Albany.

A German name not given is reported by the Statesman to have been held to answer on a charge of housebreaking at Salem on Thursday.

Wm Meek one of the founders of the village of Milwaukie Clackamas county but for some time past a resident of California is now on a visit to the State.

Mr Stansfield who was injured by a premature blast at the locks at Linn City last Monday is still in a critical condition. The four Chinamen hurt at the same time have been pronounced out of danger.

The Quarterly Meeting of the M E Church at Hillsboro will take place on Saturday and Sunday 10th and 11th inst at which will be taken into consideration the feasibility of dividing the Hillsboro Circuit.

A gentleman writing from Hillsboro says "There is a rumor that grain merchants in Portland refuse to give out commissions for buying grain. If this is true the farmers should house their grain and assist in developing a thorough credit system."

A house belonging to a Mr Johnson living one mile north of Hillsboro, took fire on Wednesday from some burning brush and burned down with all that was in it. Mr Johnson was absent from home at the time. It is a severe loss as Mr J is in rather straightened circumstances.

The Oregon City Enterprise insists that Hon J Lane shall support Greeley, and says his (Lane's) name is the property of the party and his declination unwarrantable and unjustifiable. Neither forgets that the jurisdiction of the Mayor of Oregon City don't extend over the whole State.

Our "regular" Washington county correspondent writes "There are no signs of that man who wants to make harness for the farmers at Hillsboro. Farmers are getting in a sweat for the want of one. If one don't put in an appearance soon my reputation for rating the wind will suffer."

There are surprisingly large numbers of stock being driven over the mountains to Eastern Oregon. It is estimated that 40 000 head of cattle have been driven over the Lebanon and Ochoco road this season already. Mr Fuller of Harrisburg passed over the road with 1 500 head of sheep last week.

Our Hillsboro correspondent says: "Two or three citizens of Hillsboro are having quite a jaw back through the columns of the Bulletin. Quite a number of the non belligerent Webfoot desire to be counted out of the ring. When rogues fall out honest men come by their dues. I have no land to buy or sell."

The Democrat says "A report was brought to Albany last Wednesday stating that Frank Rice and his son, of Salem had been killed by Indians on Summit Prairie near the head of John Day's river, where they had been ranching a large flock of sheep. Parties from Lebanon brought the news and stated that it was brought from Ochoco by a man named Williams, who resides near Sclo, and who came through from Ochoco in two days stopping at Lebanon last Tuesday night. A number of horses are reported to have been taken from near the place where Mr Rice had his sheep ranch. We sincerely trust that the report may prove ill founded. Mr Rice is well known in Linn county, where he resided a number of years before he removed to Salem."

BRITISH COLUMBIA

We glean the following from the British Colonist:

The population of Victoria is over four thousand.

The Robinson troupe were received by an overflowing house at Victoria.

The [illegible] Wesley Church in Victoria has been re-opened for services.

The Indians in British territory are as five to one in numbers compared with the whites.

The whaling schooner Dom[illegible] was off Protection Island last Sunday and had taken three whales.

The Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General have gone to Skeena to make a treaty with and pacify the Indians.

More than an average crop of hay and grain will be realized in the up country on Frazer and other rivers along the big road.

British Columbia has been divided into nine districts with a registrar in each to record the births marriages and deaths that occur.

The ship Prince of Wales got embayed off Bonilla Point by the fog and the steamer James Douglas from Victoria was sent to her relief.

The Federal Government has 11 parties exploring for a route for the railway to the province of British Columbia. They number officers and all about 300 men. The work will be nearly over by Christmas.

Stock books are to be opened August 1st at Victoria for subscriptions to the Canada Pacific railway. Six million dollars is apportioned to British Columbia. Ten per cent is to be paid down on subscribing.

Col Gray recently appointed Judge in British Columbia has published a book styled "Confederation of Canada" giving the political and parliamentary history of Canada from the Quebec Conference of October 1864 to the admission of British Columbia in July 1872.

In that portion of the Federal estimates relating to British Columbia the item of ten thousand dollars appears for dredge vessel tug and scows for Victoria harbor. In another part of the estimates the item of fifty five thousand dollars for harbor improvements appears. Of this latter sum Victoria will receive her share this year probably $15 000 and the expenditure for this purpose will be continued annually until the work shall have been completed.

SCHLESWIG.—Most of our readers will remember the Schleswig Holstein war and the utter inability of anybody in America to understand it. At its close a treaty was executed between Denmark and Prussia the fifth article of which guaranteed the people of South Schleswig a right to decide by ballot whether they would remain with Germany or return to Denmark. The article in question provided that if the inhabitants of those districts should manifest by free voting their desire to be joined to Denmark they should be ceded to that kingdom. Under the plea of German unity that article has been suffered to become a dead letter. No election has ever yet been held or ordered to be held by the people of South Schleswig and an armed Prussian force still occupies the soil. The subject is now being agitated but Bismarck has evidently decided that treaty or no treaty there shall be no change.

The [illegible] of Olympia learns that on last Wednesday morning an attempt was made to take Shipley and Brown the robber runaway from British Columbia on Bainbridge Island opposite Port Gamble by T O Williams Sheriff of Kitsap county. He took four or five men with him from Port Gamble and surrounding the house where they were before daybreak. But when the door opened in the morning although Brown was [illegible] the [illegible] they both succeeded in making their escape into the woods. They were pursued and W R Impett wounded in the shoulder by one of the fugitives but they were not caught. Sheriff Williams now offers a reward of three hundred dollars for the capture of Frank Shipley who shot Impett.

The Walla Walla jail is empty with the exception of one convict who wouldn't leave when he had a chance. A local paper announces that it does not report the above fact with pride since there are several outsiders who ought to be in.

A Heed of Boise City has been appointed business manager of the Ada County [illegible] Company in place of W W [illegible] resigned.

[illegible] of Philadelphia has been appointed special Commissioner to visit the Kiowa camps in Indian Territory and Mr H F Alvord of Virginia has been associated with him.

Thomas B Morris engineer on the Pacific Division of the railroad advertises a reward of two hundred and fifty dollars for evidence that will prove the death or recovery of the body of Henry Seelman.

The Olympia T[illegible] of the 1st says: "The woods on both sides of the Chambers Prairie road are on fire burning down the trees to every direction to the danger of travelers and almost preventing the use of the road."

Olympia seems to be out of patience about the irregularity of the arrivals at that place of the ocean steamers. One of the local papers has this item: "A steamer will positively sail from Portland for his place in August or September at 6 P M."

Trains on the Northern Pacific Railroad now run to within three miles of Pumphrey's and the builders expect to close this gap in about two weeks. Coggan's stages connect with the cars at their present stopping place. When they reach Pumphrey's the stages will make better time though they are doing very well now.

The Washington Territory Grand Lodge I O G T has received from Mrs A B F Ormsby of Syracuse, New York a beautiful set of regalia. It consists of thirteen pieces of scarlet silk velvet trimmed with two inch bullion fringe fine gilt thread lace and braid five stars emblem and nice rosettes with heavy tassels. Value one hundred dollars.

An Agricultural Society called the Western Washington Agricultural Society has been incorporated at Olympia. The officers for the ensuing year are C C Hewitt President, L L Smith Vice President, Marshall Blinn Treasurer, A A Manning Recording Secretary, L D Durgin Corresponding Secretary. The first annual exhibition will be held in Olympia commencing on the 9th and continuing until the 12th of October.

The Idaho States[man] says: "Dondoy with his tribe of Indians has gone to Weiser valley to fish hunt and trade horses with the Cayuses who are expected to be there two thousand strong. Dondoy and his tribe saved two white men from the scalping knife of Bannock Jim [illegible] since. He also secured a band of horses for the same party. This Indian Chief and his men should receive the consideration of the whites for this mark of friendship on their part. Bannack Jim has gone back to Camas Prairie."

The Olympia Tr[illegible] records an accident which happened on Tuesday last to Mr J R Bramwell engineer of the Port Blakely steamer. He was at work making a journal and had his metal at a liquor heat. Pouring it in the box leaning over at the same time the metal unexpectedly exploded flying up and striking him in both eyes and falling on his head. One eye was entirely destroyed—burned out—and of the other there is little hope it being so much injured as to cause the loss of his sight. His scalp was burned through wherever touched by the metal. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by a dampness in the box.

Remarkable Cure of Mr Abram Tully

SAN JOSE, August 2 1871

DR A M LORYEA & CO —Some two years since I was taken down with Inflammatory Rheumatism and was for some time treated by two physicians, but got no better. I tried nearly every remedy I heard of but nothing seemed to do me any good until about two weeks ago I was advised by Judge J Johnson to try your UNK WEED REMEDY. I procured one bottle and was entirely cured. For six weeks before taking the UNK I was compelled to go upon crutches. I consider your remedy a great blessing to suffering humanity and shall deem it my duty to inform all Rheumatics of its great virtues. Yours etc

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 3 1872

CITY.

BOLD BURGLAR —One night last week a Mr Pease, who resides in East Portland was awakened by some noise in his house He arose hastily and struck a light He found some fellow in the room who finding himself trapped feigned drunkenness and gave as an excuse that he had mistaken the house Mr Pease bade him be gone instantly and took pains to observe at the same time that the intruder had walked in through the gate and left it wide open had done the same with the front door that he had also taken the precaution to pull off his boots before entering the house The proprietor though the whole affair looked suspicious, paid no more attention to the circumstances On last Wednesday night Mr Pease was again awakened by some one scratching a match against the wall, endeavoring to strike a light He sprang out of bed but before he could procure a light, the rogues made a hasty exit through the door which by some means, they had contrived to open Inspection of the premises discovered that a small sum of money had been stolen, and numerous papers letters, etc were scattered all over the house From appearances the thieves had been in every room in the building although three of the apartments were occupied at the time Mr Pease is of the opinion that the fellow who was found first in his house is the person who committed the burglary, that probably his first visit was made with an object to familiarize himself with the premises No other articles but the money were missed, which no doubt was owing more to their precipitate departure than preference for silver, or honesty of purpose

REPAIRING NICHOLSON —Recently our attention has been called to the manner in which the Nicholson pavement in this city has been repaired in various places When this kind of pavement is first laid the blocks of wood are dipped in boiling coal tar, where they are allowed to remain for a few minutes, until the pores of the wood are well saturated with the impervious preparation, The blocks are then set in regular rows on a plank and sand foundation, the space between each row being filled with hot gravel, over which coal tar is poured until the interstices between the pebbles are completely filled The stones are then driven down firmly, and the whole pavement rendered solid to travel and impenetrable to the rain In the repairs made to numerous portions of defective pavement, this method appears to have been ignored in many instances No coal tar has been used at all. When a spot of defective Nicholson has been discovered, the gravel is taken out, the old decayed blocks removed and new ones substituted The blocks are not steeped in the boiling tar, neither is that article poured over the pavement after the blocks and stones have been placed down. Of course such pavement cannot be permanent or even secure for any length of time. The stones soon loosen by the constant jolting of heavy vehicles and work out The porous blocks soak in the rains, and the whole work proves but a temporary affair at best When this kind of pavement is repaired there seems to exist no good reason why the same care and expense should not be expended as when it was originally laid

WATER GUAGE —We were shown yesterday a new kind of water guage to be used in connection with a boiler and engine, either stationary or portable The object of the guage is to enable the engineer to ascertain with certainty the amount of water in a boiler It consists of a very small brass whistle, which is attached to the boiler in such a manner that when the water reaches a certain point a portion of the steam is allowed to escape from the boiler through the whistle This is an unerring indication as to the stage of the water It is of delicate construction, and is said by experienced engineers to be an infallible test The ordinary guage-cocks sometimes become choked and are therefore not so reliable This new invention was patented some time last year, and the Government has been so impressed with the value of this guage over those in ordinary use that all steamships are required to have one attached to their boilers. One of these new guage whistles is now used on the steamer Okanago

FOR SAN FRANCISCO —The steamship John L Stephens sailed for the above port this morning at 5 o'clock She took away the following passengers Gen Joe Hooker and servant J J Barrett, Mrs M J Davis and child, Miss Fannie Davis, L Smith, Jacob Mayer, H E Fellows, Miss McF n, Mrs J E Braily, Mrs M J Pilkington, Mrs Dan O'Neill, John D Yost, Capt Robert Catlin, U S A, Rev J H Braily, wife and child, Edward Kohn, Henry Rosenfeld, Frank Hinclay, Edward Hollen, O J McCausland, Finck jr, R Thompson, Rev O C Stratton, wife and child Mrs O Trounfalter, Mrs George Allen and daughter, H Raphael, Sam Radlich, L Baum, A Beck, John Powell, J A Biddle and wife Stephen G Spear, wife and servant, Mrs J O Littlefield A Goodnough, Mrs J B Wilson, H Cook, Chaplain Van Hosen, Moses Hehes, wife and four children Miss E Hahn, Miss L Hahn, Mrs E Field and son, Edwin Field, Mrs A J Lane, Mrs E M Vincent, John Saxe, E O West, W F & Co s messenger, and 25 in the steerage.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT —John Conway employed as tail sawyer at Douglas saw mill near the car shop, met with a terrible accident yesterday afternoon. It seems he was engaged in sawing "sliding cant," and while wedging the cant, off, the carriage started suddenly back, bringing his hand suddenly in contact with the circular saw, severing it instantaneously at the wrist and lacerating the muscles of the arm in a terrible manner As soon as possible after the accident, he was removed to the office of Dr W B Cardwell, of this city where, upon examination amputation was found necessary, which operation was skillfully performed by Dr Cardwell, assisted by Dr Alfred Kinney The patient was then removed to the Occidental Hotel where he now lies as comfortable as the circumstance will admit

THROWN OUT.—As Mr Walter Moffett and the reporter of the Herald were returning yesterday from the launching of the schooner Augusta, the buggy in which they were seated, collided on Front street, with another vehicle, and both were pitched forward to the ground Fortunately no bones were broken, but both were badly stunned and bruised by the fall It appears that the other buggy was approaching rapidly in an opposite direction, and the drivers became confused as to which side the other should pass until it was too late to avoid a collision Neither buggy was much damaged It may not have been directly attributable to reckless or too rapid driving, but less speed and greater caution on the part of drivers might save collisions accidents and broken bones

RAILROAD MATTERS —The track on the O & C R R, is now laid to within three quarters of a mile of Umpqua river The bridge which will cross that stream, has been framed at Comstock's mills, and will be sent forward as long the track to the point where the railroad intersects the river A number of workmen are engaged in building the piers, and as soon as they are completed the frame will be raised The Umpqua is 12 miles south of Oakland and about seven miles north of Roseburg The bridge will be completed the track laid and the cars running to Roseburg by the first of October The bridge which will span the Umpqua will be a Howe Truss, and be of much greater dimensions than the Harrisburg bridge

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION —Rev A. Myers, Frederick Harbaugh and George C Smith filed articles of incorporation yesterday in the County Clerk's office, of the First Lutheran Church The objects of the incorporation are to purchase, sell, receive and hold real estate, upon which it is proposed to erect a church building The duration of the incorporation is unlimited The estimated value of property real and personal, and moneys possessed by the church, is $10 000 There will be three Trustees, each holding the office for the period of three years, and one of whom is to be elected annually The church building will be located at Portland

TO WEST POINT —Captain Robert Catlin who has been residing in this city for the last two years, took his departure on the steamer Mr Catlin goes East to take a permanent position at West Point in the Commissary Department of that institution As will be remembered he lost a leg during the late war in defence of the Government, and was for over six years connected with one of the instructive departments of West Point Captain Catlin is a soldier and a gentleman, and for his services and the sacrifice of his limb in the cause of our common country, he has well earned the position to which he has recently been appointed

SPORTSMEN'S CLUB.—The committee appointed to draft a sportsmen's game law were requested to assemble last evening at the office of Messrs Caples and Moreland For some reason but a few were present Nothing was done and the committee adjourned It will be remembered that a general meeting will be held this evening at the new Police Court rooms composed of all the various committees appointed All persons who feel an interest in the passage of a game law in Oregon, are cordially invited to be in attendance

VERY LOW —Col Chris Taylor, of Yamhill county informs us that a messenger arrived at Dayton on Thursday last from the Siletz Reservation bearing the intelligence that the wife of Gen Palmer, at that place, was lying at the point of death and hourly expected to die A great number of friends started immediately on the receipt of the sad intelligence with all possible dispatch, hoping to reach the bedside of that very estimable lady before death

I O G T —At a regular meeting held July 28th at St Helens by the New Era Lodge I O G T, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term W C T Mrs M F Morse W V T Miss Angenette Holstead W F S Mrs S E Giltner, W T, Mrs Alice Williams W S, Mr C H Williams W M Jacob Halstead W C, J L Ladd, W G C McNelly W Sentinel William Bonser P W C T David F Fox

DETAINED —At last accounts the bark Van Ku was detained near Astoria by the health officers who were inspecting her to ascertain if there was any contagious disorder on board The impression that such was the case was probably caused by the death of several of her passengers while making the voyage from Hongkong If no infectious disease is discovered among the passengers, she will be allowed to proceed to Portland

LAUNCHED —Yesterday afternoon the little schooner Augusta, belonging to Walter Moffett was launched above the city, at the Terwilliger Farm Her hull has been materially lengthened and the former model considerably altered She will be rigged as a hermaphrodite brig and will soon be ready to take any line on which her owner may deem proper to place her

CROPS —A gentleman just from Yamhill county informs us that the wheat crops of that county will average from fifteen to twenty per cent greater yield than the crops of last year Spring crops are a little short and oats crops are not quite as promising as in past years The farmers are in the midst of their harvesting, and hands are in good demand

PATENTS —The following is a list of patents issued from the United States Patent Office to citizens of Oregon for the week ending July 20, 1872 Combined harvester and thresher J H Robbins, Bethel, mop holder, G Fliedner, Portland, sewing machine, J Smith, Woodburn

REPAIRED —The damages sustained by the steamer Mary Bell which collided with a snag down the river a few days ago, will be so far repaired as to admit of that boat resuming the line Monday morning She was not so badly damaged as was at first supposed

CAPSIZED —We learn that a small sail boat with two men in it, capsized yesterday in the river some distance below the city Fortunately the craft was near the shore and the two persons effected an escape to the shore, after a thorough ducking and some fright

GONE EAST —Prof Biddle formerly of Philomath College, in Benton county is now in the city Mr Biddle starts East on the steamer which sails this morning for San Francisco He goes to New Haven Connecticut

WESTERN POSTAL RECORD —The July number of the Western Postal Record published at Chicago, has been received It is an excellent journal, and contains much useful and interesting postal information

LAST TRIP —Navigation on the upper Columbia to Lewiston will be abandoned for the present season Passengers leaving Portland next Monday morning will connect with the last boat for Lewiston

CHARTERED.—We are informed that the bark Garibaldi has been chartered by the Chinese firm Wa Kee & Co, of this city, for a voyage to Hongkong She will soon commence to receive return cargo.

BATTLEMENT —A very handsome battlement is being erected on the front of Dekum's building, at the corner of Washington and First streets It is quite an ornament to the new edifice

BOARD OF DELEGATES —There will be a meeting of the Board of Delegates of the Portland Fire Department at the Police Court building this evening.

ARRESTS —Up to midnight but four arrests had been made by the police force—three drunks and an assault and battery

Revolutions Never Go Backward.
The philosophical theory that the human system when weakened by disease oppressive bodily excessive labor or any other cause should be toned and invigorated instead of being subjected to the depleting drugs is gaining ground every day The introduction of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters twenty years ago gave a powerful influence to this common sense idea As the extraordinary efficacy of the Great Vegetable Restorative has been known, multitudes of debilitated invalids have been rescued from the nausea and strength destroying potions with which it was then the fashion to drench the sick to this renovating appetizing and strengthening preparation from the finest roots herbs and barks From that time the progress of the science Revolutions never go backward From that time to the present the importance of assisting and reinforcing nature in her struggles with disease has been more and more widely and keenly appreciated by the sick and the suffering In tens of thousands of households Hostetter's Bitters are looked upon as the one thing needful in cases of Dyspepsia, General Debility Constipation Nervous Weakness Chills and Fever Bilious Affections and all conditions of the body and mind that betoken a lack of vital energy When the quicksilver ranges high and the solid flesh is resolving itself into a dew under the torrid temperature this agreeable tonic is the best possible safeguard against all the disorders generated by a sultry and unwholesome atmosphere It prevents and relieves lassitude and languor and enables the system to endure with impunity an unusual amount of exertion Of all invigorating and regulating medicines it is the safest and most wholesome

CITY.

BOLD BURGLAR —One night last week a Mr Pease, who resides in East Portland was awakened by some noise in his house He arose hastily and struck a light He found some fellow in the room who, finding himself trapped feigned drunkenness and gave as an excuse that he had mistakened the house Mr Pease bade him be gone instantly and took pains to observe at the same time that the intruder had walked in through the gate and left it wide open had done the same with the front door that he had also taken the precaution to pull off his boots before entering the house The proprietor though the [illegible] looked suspicious, paid no more attention to the circumstances. On last Wednesday night Mr Pease was again awakened by some one scratching a match against the wall, endeavoring to strike a light He sprang out of bed but [illegible] he could procure a light, the rogues made a hasty exit through the door, which, by some means, they had contrived to open [illegible] of the premises discovered that a [illegible] sum of money had been stolen and numerous papers, letters, etc were scattered all over the house From appearances the thieves had been in every room in the building although [illegible] of the apartments were occupied at the time. Mr Pease is of the opinion that the fellow who was found first in his house is the person who committed the burglary, that probably his first visit was made with an object to familiarize himself with the premises No other articles but the money were missed, which no doubt was owing more to their precipitate departure than [illegible] for silver, or honesty of purpose

REPAIRING NICHOLSON —Recently our attention has been called to the manner in which the Nicholson pavement in this city has been repaired in various places When this kind of pavement is first laid the blocks of wood are dipped in boiling coal tar, where they are allowed to remain for a few minutes, until the pores of the wood are well [illegible] with the impervious preparation The blocks are then set in regular rows on a plank and sand foundation, the space between each row being filled with hot gravel, over which coal tar is [illegible] until the interstices between the pebbles are completely filled The stones are then driven firmly, and the whole pavement rendered solid to travel and impenetrable to the rain In the repairs made to numerous portions of defective pavement, this method appears to have been [illegible] in many instances No coal tar has been [illegible] at all When a spot of defective Nicholson has been discovered, the gravel is taken out, the old [illegible] blocks removed and new ones substituted. The blocks are not steeped in the boiling tar, neither is that article poured over the pavement after the blocks and stones have been placed [illegible]. Of course such pavement cannot be permanent or even secure for any length of time The stones soon loosen by the constant jolting of heavy vehicles and work out. The porous blocks [illegible] in the rains, and the whole work proves but a temporary affair at best When this kind of pavement is repaired there seems to exist no good reason why the same care and expense should not be expended as when it was originally laid

WATER GUAGE —We were shown yesterday a new kind of water guage to be used in connection with a boiler and engine, either stationary or portable The object of the guage is to enable the engineer to ascertain with certainty the amount of water in a boiler It consists of a very small brass whistle, which is attached to the boiler in such a manner that when the water reaches a certain point a portion of the steam is allowed to escape from the boiler through the whistle This is an unerring indication as to the stage of the water It is of delicate construction, and is said by experienced engineers to be an infallible test The ordinary guage-cocks sometimes becomes choked and are therefore not so reliable This new invention was patented some time last year, and the Government has been so impressed with the value of this guage over those in ordinary use that all [illegible] are required to have one attached to their boilers. One of these new guage whistles is now [illegible] the steamer Okanago

FOR SAN FRANCISCO —The steamship John L Stephens [illegible] for the above port this morning at [illegible] She took away the following passengers. Gen Joe Hooker and servant J J Barrett, Mrs E J Davis and child, Miss Fannie Davis, L [illegible], Jacob Mayer, H E Fellows, Miss [illegible], Mrs J E Braily, Mrs M J Pilkington, [illegible] Dan O'Neill, John D Yost, Capt Robert Catlin, U S A, Rev J H Braily, wife and child, Edward Kohn, Henry Rosenfeld, Frank Hinckley, Edward Hollen, O J McCausland, Finck jr, R Thompson, Rev C C Stratton, wife and child, Mrs O Trounfalter, Mrs George Allen and daughter, H Raphael, Sam Radlich, L Baum, A Beck, John Powell, J A Biddle and wife Stephen G Spear, wife and servant, Mrs J O Littlefield A Goodnough, Mrs J B Wilson, H Cook, Chaplain Van Hosen, Moses Hahn, wife and four children Miss E Hahn, Miss L Hahn, Mrs E Field and son, Edwin Field, Mrs A J Lane, Mrs E M Vincent, John Saxe, E O West, W F & Co s messenger, and 25 in the steerage.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT —John Conway employed as tail sawyer at Douglas' saw mill near the car shop, met with a terrible accident yesterday afternoon. It seems he was engaged in sawing "siding cant," and while wedging the cant, off, the carriage started suddenly back, bringing his hand suddenly in contact with the circular saw, severing it instantaneously at the wrist and lacerating the muscles of the arm in a terrible manner. As soon as possible after the accident, he was removed to the office of Dr W B Cardwell, of this city where, upon examination, amputation was found necessary, which operation was skilfully performed by Dr Cardwell, as sisted by Dr Alfred Kinney The patient was then removed to the Occidental Hotel, where he now lies as comfortable as the circumstance will admit

THROWN OUT —As Mr Walter Moffatt and the reporter of the Herald were returning yesterday from the launching of the schooner Augusta the buggy in which they were seated collided on Front street, with another vehicle and both were [illegible] forward to the ground Fortunately, no bones were broken, but both were badly stunned and bruised by the fall. It appears that the other buggy was approaching rapidly in an opposite [illegible], and the drivers became confused as to which side the other should pass until it was too late to avoid a collision Neither buggy was much damaged. It may not have been directly attributable to reckless or too rapid driving, but less speed and greater caution on the part of drivers might save collisions accidents and broken bones.

RAILROAD MATTERS —The track on the A C R R, is now laid to within [illegible] of a mile of Umpqua river The bridge which will cross that stream has been framed at Comstock s mills, and will be sent forward along the track to the point where the railroad in crosses the river A number of workmen are engaged in building the piers, and as soon as they are completed the frame will be raised The Umpqua is 12 miles south of Oak and and about seven miles north of Roseburg The bridge will be completed the track laid and the cars running to Roseburg by the first of October The bridge which will span the Umpqua will be a Howe Truss and be of much greater dimensions than the Harrisburg bridge

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION —Rev A. Myers Frederick Harbaugh and George C Smith filed articles of incorporation yesterday in the County Clerk's office, of the First Lutheran Church The objects of the incorporation are to purchase, sell, receive and hold real estate, upon which it is proposed to erect a church building The duration of the incorporation is unlimited The estimated value of property real and personal, and moneys possessed by the church, is $10,000 There will be three Trustees, each holding the office for the period of three years, and one of whom is to be elected annually The church building will be located at Portland.

TO WEST POINT —Captain Robert Catlin who has been residing in this city for the last two years, took his departure on the steamer Mr Catlin goes East to take a permanent position at West Point in the Commissary Department of that institution As will be remembered he lost a leg during the late war in defence of the Government, and was for over six years connected with one of the instructive departments of West Point Captain Catlin is a soldier and a gentleman, and for his services and the sacrifice of his limb in the cause of our common country, he has well earned the position to which he has recently been appointed

SPORTSMEN'S CLUB.—The committee appointed to draft a sportsmen's game law were requested to assemble last evening at the office of Messrs Caples and Moreland. For some reason but a few were present Nothing was done and the committee adjourned It will be remembered that a general meeting will be held this evening at the new Police Court rooms composed of all the various committees appointed All persons who feel an interest in the passage of a game law in Oregon, are cordially invited to be in attendance

VERY LOW —Col Chris Taylor, of Yamhill county, informs us that a messenger arrived at Dayton on Thursday last from the Siletz Reservation, bearing the intelligence that the wife of Gen Palmer, at that place, was lying at the point of death and hourly expected to die A great number of friends started immediately on the receipt of the sad intelligence with all possible dispatch, hoping to reach the bedside of that very estimable lady before death

I O G T —At a regular meeting held July 28th at St Helens by the New Era Lodge I O G T, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term W C T Mrs M E Morse W V T, Miss Angenette Halstead W F S Mrs S D Giltner, W T, Mrs Alice Williams W S, Mr C H Williams W M Jacob Halstead W C, J L Ladd, W G C McNelly W Sentinel, William Bonser P W C T David F Fox

DETAINED —At last accounts the bark Van Ilo was detained near Astoria by the health officers who were inspecting her to ascertain if there was any contagious disorder on board The impression that such was the case was probably caused by the death of several of her passengers while making the voyage from Hongkong If no infectious disease is discovered among the passengers, she will be allowed to proceed to Portland

LAUNCHED —Yesterday afternoon the little schooner Augusta, belonging to Walter Moffett, was launched above the city, at the Terwilliger Farm Her hull has been materially lengthened and the former model considerably altered She will be rigged as a hermaphrodite brig and will soon be ready to take any line on which her own or may deem proper to place her

CROPS —A gentleman just from Yamhill county informs us that the wheat crops of that county will average from fifteen to twenty per cent greater yield than the crops of last year Spring crops are a little short and oats crops are not quite as promising as in past years The farmers are in the midst of their harvesting; and hands are in good demand

PATENTS —The following is a list of patents issued from the United States Patent Office to citizens of Oregon for the week ending July 20, 1872 Combined harvester and thresher, J H Robbins, Bethel, mop holder, G Fliedner, Portland, sawing machine, J Smith, Woodburn

REPAIRED —The damages sustained by the steamer Mary Bell which collided with a snag down the river a few days ago will be so far repaired as to admit of that boat resuming the line Monday morning She was not so badly damaged as was at first supposed

CAPSIZED —We learn that a small sail boat with two men in it, capsized yesterday in the river some distance below the city. Fortunately the craft was near the shore and the two persons effected an escape to the shore, after a thorough ducking and some fright

GONE EAST —Prof Biddle, formerly of Philomath College, in Benton county is now in the city Mr. Biddle starts East on the steamer which sails this morning for San Francisco He goes to New Haven Connecticut

WESTERN POSTAL RECORD —The July number of the Western Postal Record published at Chicago, has been received It is an excellent journal, and contains much useful and interesting postal information

LAST TRIP —Navigation on the upper Columbia to Lewiston will be abandoned for the present season, Passengers leaving Portland next Monday morning will connect with the last boat for Lewiston

CHARTERED.—We are informed that the bark Garibaldi has been chartered by the Chinese firm, Wa Kee & Co, of this city, for a voyage to Hongkong She will soon commence to receive return cargo.

BATTLEMENT —A very handsome battlement is being erected on the front of Dekum's building, at the corner of Washington and First streets It is quite an ornament to the new edifice

BOARD OF DELEGATES.—There will be a meeting of the Board of Delegates of the Portland Fire Department at the Police Court building this evening.

ARRESTS —Up to midnight but four arrests had been made by the police force—three drunks and an assault and battery

Revolutions Never Go Backward.
The philosophical theory that the human system when weakened by disease oppressive [illegible] excessive labor or any other cause should be toned and invigorated instead of being [illegible] by depleting drugs is gaining ground every day The introduction of Hostetter s Stomach Bitters [illegible] gave a powerful impulse to this common sense idea As the extraordinary efficacy of the Great Vegetable Restorative became known multitudes of debilitated invalids turned with loathing from the nauseous and strength destroying potions with which it was then the fashion to drench the sick to this renovating appetizing vitalizing [illegible] derived from the finest roots herbs and barks [illegible] Revolutions never go backward From that time to [illegible] the importance of assisting and reinforcing nature in her struggles with disease has been [illegible] more and more appreciated by the sick and the suffering In tens of thousands of households Hostetter s Bitters are looked upon as the one thing needful in cases of Dyspepsia General Debility Constipation Nervous Weakness Chills and Fever Billious Affections and all conditions of the body and mind that betoken a lack of vital energy When the quicksilver ranges high and the solid flesh is resolving itself into a dew under the torrid temperature this agreeable tonic is the best possible safeguard against all the disorders generated by a sultry and unwholesome atmosphere It prevents and relieves lassitude and languor and enables the system to endure with impunity an unusual amount of [illegible] and invigorating and regulating medicines it is the purest and most wholesome
